The war in Europe has got started. There has been a battle in Silesia between the Prusians and Austrians, but the report leaves one in doubt as to the real victors, both parties claiming it.

This is evidently the age of slang. The fast young man, when he would drink, (and that's always,) asks for a "wash." When he would smoke, he demands a "torch." When he eats he "wrestles his hash." When he is drunk, he is "swimpsey." When he sleeps, he is "under the blinks," and when he steals, he "goes through somebody." His friends are "gray ducks," self into a dangling attitude." A man is "nibs," a woman a "ben." Would it not be a paying thing for an enterprising man to get up a slang dictiona-ry? If we were to propound this last interrogatory to a fast young man, be would immediately respond "you bet."
